

Artesian Well

11. Artesian Well, on Portage Point Drive northwest of Little Eden Camp

The Early Rockery
of the Artesian Well Was Built around an Iron Kettle

In a shady semicircle of cedars, Little Eden Camp's artesian well continues to flow, offering pleasant-tasting water as a friendly gesture to passersby and many who regularly bottle it for drinking water. An early remembrance of this well is in 1924, so it is probable that horses even drank from the original basin, which was in use until the present rockery was built in 1990.

After Portage Point Drive Was Widened in 1989-1990, the Present Rockery
Was Built